message from the chairman

At a time in history not unlike its early years in the 1920s, The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations is responding with vision and energy to a changing world and the increased need for informed and inclusive debate on international affairs and the United States' role in the world.

The Chicago Council is in the midst of a transformation in which it remains committed to its original mission of fostering awareness and discussion of key issues in Chicago while it pursues an expansion of its influence in the national and McKinsey and Company. In June 2005 the board approved an ambitious strategic plan for 2005 to 2010 that will transform The Chicago Council into one of the foremost centers of awareness and influence on global affairs in the United States.

In his four years as president of the Council, Marshall Bouton has brought great imagination and dedication to the task of redefining the goals and revitalizing the activities of the Council for a global era. The Council is fortunate to have had his leadership during this critical time.

There could not be a more important time during which our city and the nation need the work of the Council and the commitment of its board.

international arenas. The Council seeks to serve Chicago as a creative catalyst in its globalization and the nation as a vital voice in the discourse on global challenges and U.S. responses.

The changes at the Council are evident on many fronts—more and new programs, larger audiences, heightened visibility, increased revenues, larger budgets, improved governance, expanded staff, new offices. Yet the Council is pursuing a prudent course of change based on balanced goals and budgets. Despite an overall doubling of its budget, the Council has balanced revenues and expenses in three of the last four years and has added substantially to its reserves.

And the Council is on course for responsible expansion in the years ahead. During 2004–05 the Council's board engaged in a wide-ranging strategic planning process with the valuable assistance of Both Marshall and I are deeply indebted to John W. Madigan and Philip M. Condit, who, as my predecessors in the chair during the last three years, launched and sustained the Council's new efforts. Their foresight and support made the difference.

The Council has also depended greatly on the committed service of four vice chairs, John F. Manley, Michael H. Moskow, Shirley Welsh Ryan, and Geoffrey B. Shields (until July 2004). They have given most generously of their ideas, counsel, and resources to the success of this institution.

Finally, I want to thank all my fellow board members for believing in and supporting in countless ways the mission of The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations. There could not be a more important time during which our city and the nation need the work of the Council and the commitment of its board.

message from the president

The three years from July 2002 to June 2005 covered by this report have been a period of quickening change and heightened challenge in world affairs and at The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations.

The continuing threat of terrorism, the conflict in Iraq and surrounding controversy, the mounting crisis over nuclear advances in North Korea and Iran, the rise of China and India as economic dynamos and claimants to great power status, the increasing dangers to global health

The Chicago Forum

Chicago's evolution as a global city depends on its ability to understand the forces shaping the future; to project its strengths as a global commercial, population, and civic center; and to connect its leaders to their counterparts around the world. The Chicago Council's activities during the last three years have sought to advance all three of these aims.

The Council substantially increased public programming during the last three years, devoting and the environment, drift if not divergence in transatlantic relations—these and other forces have intensified debate in the United States and internationally over the way forward.

The Chicago Council has responded by further strengthening its role as a forum to promote awareness and discussion and by expanding its efforts to influence opinion and policy formation through contributions to the national and international discourse. Building on its eighty-three-year history as the premier international affairs institution in Chicago and the Midwest, the Council has embarked on a transformative journey toward increased relevance for a globalizing Chicago, for a United States facing unprecedented leadership challenges, and for an international community in great flux.

much of it to the discussion of global terrorism, the war in Iraq, and the implications of both for U.S. policy in the post-9/11 era. Through the Asia in Chicago program, we have given considerable emphasis to the continuing emergence of China and, more recently, India, as rising powers. We have also continued to draw attention to changes in Europe and U.S.-European relations through the Konrad Adenauer Program for European Policy Studies. Appearances on the Council's platform by Pakistani president Pervez Musharraf, Chinese president Jiang Zemin, Indian deputy prime minister L. K. Advani, and Ukrainian president Viktor Yushchenko have highlighted activities in all these areas.

The Council's Global Chicago Center has focused on the challenges and opportunities of globalization for Chicago. Its book, Global Chicago, published in 2004, has been read in boardrooms, newsrooms, and classrooms across Chicago. The center has concentrated much of its effort on engaging Chicago's diverse ethnic groups, especially its new immigrant communities, in building the city's global connections. The Mexican American community is of particular interest because of its size, newness, and vitality.

Another high priority of the Council has been to engage and serve the business community by providing information and access to international political and business leaders. The Council's Corporate Program, which merged with the Mid-America Committee in spring 2002, has hosted CEO roundtables with policymakers and symposia

The [strategic] plan envisages the Council becoming one of the foremost centers of influence in the United States on opinion and policy formation on global affairs while it continues to serve the increasingly global interests of its home city.

on topics such as Chicago as a financial center, offshore outsourcing, and aviation as well as a major summit on international trade. In October 2004 the Corporate Program hosted its first and highly successful corporate leadership mission to Shanghai and Beijing.

The Council has also created new vehicles for Chicago's globally oriented leaders to connect with each other and with international counterparts. The President's Circle is a network of prominent Chicagoans from diverse fields who participate in key events such as the popular Global Connections Dinner Series and serve as advisors to and investors in the Council. In addition, the China and India

Roundtables bring together individuals with a shared interest in those countries and their relations with the United States.

Finally, the Council continues its long-established outreach to Chicago's emerging leaders and young adults through the Young Leaders Exchange, the Young Professionals Program, and a new effort, the GOAt Program, targeted at engaging young people in lively discussions at clubs and other popular venues.

National Discourse

In a globalizing world, Chicago's interests are increasingly intertwined with national and international trends and issues. At the same time, the discourse on national interests and policies can no longer be the exclusive province of East Coast circles and institutions. The Chicago Council has concluded that it can serve Chicago and the nation by expanding its contributions to national and international discourse.

The Chicago Council, by virtue of its location and history, can with great advantage bring the concerns and perspectives of Chicago and the Midwest to bear on opinion and policy formation nationally and internationally. Over the last three years it began to enlarge its role in that discourse through the creation of intellectual capital and the expansion of leadership dialogue.

The effort began with a broadening of the Council's thirty-year research focus on American public opinion and U.S. foreign policy. In 2002, for the first time, the Council carried out comparative research on U.S. and European attitudes in collaboration with the German Marshall Fund. In 2004 the Council mounted for the first time a biennial public opinion study, continued its comparative research through collaborative studies in Mexico and Korea, and added to the study a thematic focus on "rules of the game" in international relations.

A highly significant innovation was The Chicago Council's first-ever task force study. In the fall of 2003 the Council convened a group of about forty experts and leaders, chaired by former Illinois governor Jim Edgar, former INS commissioner Doris Meissner, and Chicago business leader Alejandro Silva, to examine how immigration has impacted Chicago, the Midwest, and the nation and how national policy should be improved. The Immigration Task Force's findings and recommendations, released in June 2004, were widely disseminated and discussed.

The Council has also launched an expansion of its leadership dialogue. In addition to the roundtables, dialogues, symposia, and summits already mentioned, the biennial Atlantic Conference, which since 1974 has brought together European, North American, and South American foreign policy leaders, reached out for the first time to participants from Africa at the November 2002 conference in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. In November 2004 the conference was held for the first time on the African continent, in Capetown, South Africa. The topic of the Capetown meeting, "Rules of the Game," drew on the conclusions of the Council's just-completed public opinion study.

In the fall of 2002 the Council launched a new conference series, the America and the World Conference, to bring foreign policy leaders and experts from around the world to Chicago for high-quality discussion of contemporary issues. Organized in cooperation with the McCormick Tribune Foundation, the conference was held again in June 2004 and September 2005. In each instance the topic of the conference was chosen to reinforce other Council activities such as the public opinion study or the fall lecture series.

Institutional Development

The Council's new directions over the last three years have been made possible by a considerable expansion of its budget and resources. Expenses increased from $3.33 million in FY02 to $5.22 million in FY03, $5.47 million in FY04, and $4.74 million in FY05. The Council balanced its budgets in two of the three years but experienced a modest deficit in FY04.

The Council's growth was supported by the generosity of many donors who provided unrestricted and programmatic support. The Council's board more than doubled its giving to the annual New Challenges Fund during the three-year period, and support from the newly formed President's Circle increased from $87,500 to $322,500. The Global Leadership Awards Dinner, first held in spring 2003, is an important new forum as well as a source of significant financial support. I wish to make special mention of an extraordinary gift to the Council, an unsolicited capital grant of $1 million, from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation on the occasion of its twenty-fifth anniversary in 2003.

Most of all, the Council's success has been the result of wise and engaged board leadership. I am deeply indebted to the three men who served as chairmen of the Council during this period, John W. Madigan, Philip M. Condit, and Lester Crown, for their generous commitments of time, energy, and counsel. The Council is also very fortunate to have had the support of four superb vice chairmen over the last three years, John F. Manley, Michael H. Moskow, Shirley Welsh Ryan, and Geoffrey B. Shields (until July 2004). Each of them has made an extraordinary contribution to the life of this institution.

Looking Ahead

Over the last year-and-a-half of this period, the Council's board was engaged in a wide-ranging and intensive strategic planning process, the first of its kind in the Council's history. This was necessary to evaluate the institution's progress over the last three years and to involve a growing and changing board in setting directions for the Council's development in the years ahead.

On June 23, 2005, the board approved a strategic plan to guide the Council's growth from 2005 through 2010. Drawing on the experience of the last three years, the plan envisages the Council becoming one of the foremost centers of influence in the United States on opinion and policy formation on global affairs while it continues to serve the increasingly global interests of its home city.

This is an exciting vision true to the spirit of Chicago. I feel deeply privileged by the opportunity to work with the board and my very able staff colleagues to realize it.

the chicago forum

Only with a deep understanding of our global connections and a commitment to bridging cultural divides can we build a peaceful and prosperous future. The Chicago Council's local programs promote global thinking, bringing diverse communities together to discover and discuss the issues that connect and concern us as world citizens.

A leading forum in Chicago and the Midwest for dialogue on global issues

Public Programs

World Leaders

More and more world leaders include Chicago on their itineraries when visiting the United States. As the premier platform in Chicago for keynote addresses by heads of state, the Council offers members the opportunity to see, hear, and question the world's most powerful decision makers. Over the past three years the Council welcomed the country's neighbors, Prime Minister Jean Chrétien of Canada and President Vicente Fox of Mexico, as well as President Jiang Zemin of China, General Pervez Musharraf of Pakistan, President Hamid Karzai of Afghanistan, King Abdullah II of Jordan, President Mary McAleese of Ireland, President Valdas Adamkus of Lithuania, Chancellor Gerhard Schröder of Germany, and President Viktor Yushchenko of Ukraine.

Chicago and the World Forum

Chicago and the World Forum is the Council's most prominent public lecture series. The series features senior government officials and other leading experts from the United States and around the world, who address a topic of mutual concern from different perspectives. Topics over the past three years have focused on the responsibilities and risks of American power, the future of the transatlantic relationship, perspectives on the war on terrorism, the Middle East after Iraq, foreign policy issues in the 2004 U.S. presidential election, and American foreign policy in a transforming world.

Global Affairs

Throughout the year The Chicago Council offers numerous public programs addressing a wide range of topics and perspectives on global affairs. These programs include presentations by book authors, speeches by current and former U.S. and international leaders, and panels on critical issues and current events.

From 2002 to 2005 programs looked especially closely at the impact of the war on terrorism on America's role in the world, the war in Iraq and its aftermath, developments in the Middle East, the administration's national security strategy, and directions in U.S. foreign policy. Programs also focused on developments in Asia, especially China, India, and North Korea, as well as relations with Europe, crises in Africa, and economic and cultural relations in the Americas.

Highlights included keynote speeches by then national security advisor Condoleezza Rice, secretary of defense Donald Rumsfeld, then Senate candidate (now senator) Barak Obama, former chief UN weapons inspector Hans Blix, philanthropist George Soros, former secretary of state Madeleine Albright, Shanghai mayor Han Zheng, deputy prime minister of India Lal Krishna Advani, and British foreign secretary Jack Straw. The Council continued its efforts to increase cooperation with local, national, and international organizations in its programming, partnering with nearly 300 organizations over the past three years (see page 47). The Council also reached out to suburban audiences with programs cosponsored with the College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn. Public programs were generously supported by the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, the McCormick Tribune Foundation, the Blair Hull Family Foundation, and the Tawani Foundation.

Konrad Adenauer Program for European Policy Studies

The Konrad Adenauer Program for European Policy Studies, which supports all public programs related to Europe, was established in 1988 with a grant from the government of the Federal Republic of Germany. The program allows the Council to maintain a strong focus on U.S.-European issues and promote greater understanding and closer ties with allies across the Atlantic. During the past three years, transatlantic relations emerged as a key concern. Experts and policymakers from both sides of the Atlantic discussed and debated the state of relations and what the future holds. Highlights included the visits of German chancellor Gerhard Schröder and Ukraine president Viktor Yushchenko as well as lectures with European Union officials, the supreme allied commander Europe, European ambassadors, journalists, and area experts.

Asia in Chicago

The Asia in Chicago program, established in the fall of 2001 in cooperation with the Asia Society in New York, helps bring Council audiences more programs on Asia-related issues. Public programs featured speakers such as Ambassador Han Sung Joo of Korea, Ambassador Ronen Sen of India, and Ambassador Kishore Mahbubani of Singapore. Other programs included a half-day conference on Korea, a presentation by a delegation from Vietnam, and a panel discussion on Islam in Southeast Asia. Asia in Chicago programs are cosponsored by the Center for East Asian Studies and the South Asia Language and Area Center at the University of Chicago.

GOAt (Globally Occupied Attention)

GOAt is a new program initiated in June 2004 to bring foreign policy discussions to young people in Chicago's neighborhoods. Held in popular barroom/music venues, the program addresses important global issues in an entertaining, debate-style format tailored to its youthful audience. The casual, relaxed atmosphere promotes audience interaction, where participants can ask tough questions and voice their opinions. Topics have ranged from "Should We Stay or Should We Go Now?" addressing the war in Iraq to "Am I American?" focusing on immigration and the expectations of an American citizen.

Young Professionals

The Council's more traditional program for younger people, Young Professionals, is designed for individuals in their twenties and thirties to deepen understanding of foreign affairs, global business, and international cultural issues through special monthly lectures, discussions, and social events. Over the past three years, programs have looked at issues from human rights and the global trading system to the 2004 U.S. presidential election. Young Professionals also enjoyed annual holiday parties. The program is supported in part by the John E. Rielly Young Professionals Fund, established in honor of former Council president John E. Rielly for his commitment to strengthening programs for younger people.

The Global Chicago Center

The Global Chicago Center of The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations helps Chicagoans strengthen their understanding of Chicago as a global city, better grasp the challenges posed by global issues that have local impact, and work together, using all the city's global assets, to help the city and region grow and thrive in the global era. Through the book Global Chicago as well as through television programs, public forums, and especially dialogues with the city's vibrant ethnic communities, the Global Chicago Center is a leading player in Chicago's rebirth as a twenty-first-century city. The Global Chicago Center is supported by grants and services from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, the Chicago Community Trust, and other funders.

Engaging New Immigrant Communities

Diasporic Dialogues

The Global Chicago Center, in cooperation with local community organizations, has initiated a series of discussions and meetings with leaders of some of Chicago's new immigrant groups. These "New Faces of Chicago" programs have established links with the Mexican American, Korean American, Chinese American, South Asian American, and Filipino American communities. In addition, a dialogue has been opened with leaders of the city's African American community. These discussions have dealt with such issues as education, housing, cultural identity, access to banking and credit facilities, and other issues. More dialogues are planned, especially to bring the various communities into touch with each other around the Global Chicago table. The intention is to educate a wider audience about Chicago's ethnic diversity and to foster contacts with Chicago's leaders.

Mexican American Task Force

The "New Faces" programs on the Mexican American community led directly to formation of the Mexican American Roundtable, a regular seminar bringing together Mexican American leaders with leaders of the broader Chicago community. Now the Roundtable has led to a full Mexican American Task Force aimed at increasing the integration and engagement of the Chicago region's Mexican community into the economic, political, and social life of the region. The Task Force will produce recommendations for action by the legislature, city council, school boards, and other institutions, including Mexican American institutions. Support for the Task Force comes from Exelon Corporation, the Chicago Community Trust, The Boeing Company, and the McCormick Tribune Foundation as well as individual funding.

The Asian American Experience

In May 2004 the Global Chicago Center organized an unprecedented two-day program on the Asian American Experience in the Midwest. Asian American leaders from eight midwestern states came to Chicago to discuss the history of Asian Americans in the Midwest, their role in business and politics, the impact on their communities of public policies, U.S.-Asian relations, and the meaning of being Asian American in the heartland, especially for young people. The symposium was cosponsored by Leadership Education for Asian Pacifics, Inc. (LEAP), Asia Society, the Asian American Institute, and the East Asian Studies Center and South Asia Language and Area Center at the University of Chicago, with lead funding from Abbott Laboratories and McDonald's.

Raising Awareness of Chicago's Global Connections

Global Chicago Book

Global Chicago, the first book to document Chicago's transformation from an industrial behemoth to a true global city, is the result of work by the Global Chicago Center and some of the city's leading academics, journalists, and practitioners. Edited by Charles Madigan and published by the University of Illinois Press, the book is intended to change the way Chicagoans think about their town. Its chapters deal with globalization's impact on Chicago's economy, politics, arts, education, and, of course, on its people and neighborhoods. It includes a chapter by University of Chicago soci-funded by The Boeing Company, focused on how globalization—especially the forces of trade and immigration—is affecting and changing Chicago and its people. Each segment was coproduced by the Global Chicago Center and WTTW and used the expertise of WTTW teams to dramatize the impact of globalization on Chicagoans. The project also included the production of Global Chicago Minutes, brief facts about the city and globalization, as well as short segments for children.

Global Chicago Web Site

One of the most powerful tools offered by the Global Chicago Center for members and the general public is its Web site, www.globalchicago.org. The site is the Chicago area's most comprehensive, Web-based source of information on the city's local-global resources. More than 28,000 people visit the site each month to learn about global events taking place in the city; to find the latest news from more than 150 countries in more than 100 languages; to get background information on other countries; to access the sites of hundreds of other organizations in Chicago and around the world dealing with a myriad of international issues; and to share opinions, information, and contacts on global issues that impact Chicagoans. Anyone in Chicago with an interest in global affairs can register free of charge for the online database.

Midwest Media Project and Guide

The Global Chicago Center has received funding from the Ford Foundation to carry out a two-year program to strengthen coverage of global news by midwestern newspapers. The project builds on Global Chicago's Media Guide to Foreign Policy Expertise in the Midwest. This guide, posted on the Global Chicago Web site, lists more than 1,000 experts from seventy leading midwestern colleges and universities, plus think tanks, foundations, and other institutions. The purpose is to give midwestern journalists both the global background to their local stories and to put them in touch with experts who can be used as sources or as authors of commentaries.

ologist Saskia Sassen on the structure of global cities and why Chicago belongs in their ranks. The closing chapter, by Michael Moskow, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, looks at Chicago's future. Funding from the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation made the book possible.

Global Chicago Segments

The Global Chicago Center and WTTW-Channel 11, Chicago's public television station, collaborated on a pilot series of Global Chicago segments broadcast during WTTW's flagship evening program, Chicago Tonight. These segments,

Corporate Programs

The Corporate Program

The Corporate Program helps Chicago companies address today's global challenges by illuminating key international trends, bringing global leaders to Chicago, and linking Chicago and the Midwest to world markets. Counting nearly eighty corporations as members, The Corporate Program is the region's leading forum for business executives to interact with heads of state, government ministers, business leaders, leading academics, diplomats, and thought leaders.

The program was formed in the late spring of 2002 when the program of the Mid-America Committee for International Business and Government Cooperation was combined with the Corporate Service Program of The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations'. Initially called the Mid-America Committee, the name was changed in 2004 to The Corporate Program.

Over the past three years, The Corporate Program played host to a number of dignitaries from around the world. Most notably, the program was pleased to welcome to Chicago His Excellency Jiang Zemin, president of the People's Republic of China; His Excellency Jean Chrétien, prime minister of Canada; His Excellency Olusegun Obasanjo, president of Nigeria; His Excellency Viktor Yushchenko, president of Ukraine; and Her Excellency Barbara Masekela, South African ambassador to the United States. The Corporate Program also welcomed important business and economic leaders, including Peter Brabeck-Letmathe, vice-chairman of the board of Nestle S.A., and Axel Weber, president of the German Bundesbank.

The Corporate Program has also expanded its scope, organizing symposia to provide in-depth examination of critical business issues. Recent symposia have focused on offshore outsourcing, Chicago as a global financial center, and business in India.

Chicago-Shanghai Dialogue

In order to strengthen long-term cooperation between the United States and China, The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations initiated the Chicago-Shanghai Dialogue, a series of meetings between leaders from Chicago and the Midwest and from China's great cities, especially Shanghai. Held alternately in Shanghai and Chicago, the Chicago-Shanghai Dialogue addresses themes of critical importance such as trade, education, communication and transportation, public health, and migration.

The inaugural Chicago-Shanghai Dialogue took place October 17–21, 2004, in Shanghai and Beijing. It was led by Chicago mayor Richard M. Daley and was coconvened by Council chairman Lester Crown, former Council chairman Philip M. Condit, and Council board member William M. Daley. The delegation included twenty-five business and civic leaders from Chicago, who met with leaders in the host cities to address shared concerns and develop new forms of cooperation. Meetings were hosted by Shanghai mayor Han Zheng and the Foreign Affairs Office of the Shanghai Municipal Government; the Shanghai Institute for International Studies, the collaborating organization in Shanghai; and the Chinese People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries, the host organization in Beijing.

This initial Chicago-Shanghai Dialogue was sponsored by Motorola, Inc.; United Airlines; A.T. Kearney; JPMorgan Chase and Company; the Chicago Mercantile Exchange; and Dragon Financial Capital and was organized in collaboration with the City of Chicago and Chicago Sister Cities International.

The second Chicago-Shanghai Dialogue, organized with Chicago Sister Cities International and the Shanghai Institute for International Studies, was held in Chicago on April 5, 2005. Mayor Han Zheng of Shanghai led a delegation of approximately forty business and academic leaders from Shanghai to Chicago to discuss “Creating a Global City.” Meetings focused on attracting trade

Kearney; Baker & McKenzie; The Boeing Company; Globe Union Group; and Skidmore, Owings & Merrill. Collaborating sponsors of the luncheon included the Chicagoland Chamber of Commerce, the Consulate General of the People’s Republic of China, the Executives’ Club of Chicago, U.S.-China Chamber of Commerce, and World Business Chicago. The next Chicago-Shanghai Dialogue is scheduled to take place in Shanghai in the fall of 2006.

Chicago Conference on the Global Economy

On September 15–16, 2003, immediately after the collapse of trade talks in Cancun, Mexico, The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations hosted the first Chicago Conference on the Global Economy, focusing on “The Future of the Global Trading System.” The conference was the first opportunity after the World Trade Organization meeting for trade ministers and experts to discuss publicly the results of the Cancun Ministerial and implications for the global trading system. The conference was opened by Chicago mayor Richard M. Daley; Philip M. Condit, former chairman and chief executive officer of The Boeing Company; and Marshall M. Bouton, president of The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations.

Hundreds of international leaders in business and government participated in the two-day event, which included panel discussions, keynote addresses, and a leadership forum addressing such issues as agriculture, intellectual property, access to markets, implementation of the Uruguay Round of negotiations and developing country needs, trade agreements, global health and poverty, and the challenges to global trade. Among the keynote speakers and panelists were G. Allen Andreas, chairman and chief executive of Archer Daniels Midland Company; Gro Harlem Brundtland, former prime minister of Norway and former director-general of the World Health Organization; Thai deputy prime minister Korn Dabbaransi; Ambassador and investment, urban planning, and real estate development. Mayor Daley welcomed the delegation and Mayor Han Zheng delivered the keynote address at a public luncheon. Mayor Han Zheng also visited Walter Payton College Preparatory School, the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, and Millennium Park. The mayor and his delegation attended a reception for members of the Council’s China Roundtable and the China Committee of Chicago Sister Cities as well as a dinner hosted by Mayor Daley.

This second Chicago-Shanghai Dialogue was generously sponsored by Aon Corporation;

Carla A. Hills, chairman and chief executive officer of Hills & Company, International Consultants; Juma Ngasongwa, Tanzania minister of industry and trade; Petros Sourmelis, counselor and head of the Trade Section of the European Commission Delegation to the United States; and Lori Wallach, director of Public Citizen's Global Trade Watch.

The conference was co-organized by the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University, the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business, and World Business Chicago. It was sponsored by The Boeing Company, Archer Daniels Midland Company, A.T. Kearney, Corn Products International, McDonald's Corporation, Tribune Company, Caterpillar Inc., The Financial Times Ltd., and the Illinois Department of Commerce and Economic Opportunity (DCEO).

Aviation Summit

An important initiative for corporate leaders is the Council's establishment of leadership summits. The goal of the summits is to bring together industry leaders, senior policymakers, and experts from Chicago and around the globe to examine critical issues in the relationship between the Chicago and global economies. The first such summit was held on April 21, 2005, on the topic "Moving the World: Global Aviation and the Global Economy."

This summit, organized by the Council's Corporate Program, focused on the issues confronting global aviation and offered recommendations for the future. About 100 leaders spent the day discussing such issues as globalized aviation, the challenges of airline consolidation and competition, the role of governments and the importance of deregulation, the problems facing the air cargo industry and its future, and the specific situation of O'Hare Airport, the most vital airport both to Chicago and to the nation.

Glenn F. Tilton, chairman, president, and chief executive officer of United Airlines, chaired the summit. Michael L. Ducker, executive vice president of FedEx, and Justin Zubrod, vice president of A.T. Kearney, were the vice chairs. The summit was cosponsored by United Airlines, FedEx Express International, A.T. Kearney, and The Boeing Company. It was co-organized by World Business Chicago, the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University, and the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business.

Leadership Programs

Chairman's Circle

The Chairman's Circle is an elite group of community leaders who support the Council at the highest level. Established in 2004, founding members contributed $25,000 each for 2004–05, demonstrating their unwavering commitment to the institution and its mission. These individuals are part of the Council's core leadership, providing invaluable guidance to the organization.

President's Circle

The President's Circle is the Council's largest senior leadership forum, composed of individuals philanthropically interested in the Council's efforts to influence public discourse on international affairs and to contribute to the policymaking process nationally. The Council relies on these civic leaders for their expertise, counsel, and support. Membership requires a minimum unrestricted contribution of $1,000 annually.

In June 2004 the Chicago Committee, the Council's senior leadership forum since 1961, was merged with the President's Circle. With the addition of many previous Chicago Committee members, drawn from the city's business, government, nonprofit, academic, civic, labor, and religious leadership, the President's Circle now includes more than 270 memberships.

President's Circle members have the opportunity to host and chair special events and are further engaged as program contributors and presenters. Invitational dinners with visiting authors, dignitaries, and heads of state give President's Circle members close access to public policymakers. Highlights of the past three years include invitations to galas honoring Ukraine president Viktor Yushchenko, Afghanistan president Hamid Karzai, Chinese president Jiang Zemin, Canadian prime minister Jean Chrétien, and Irish president Mary McAleese; dinner discussions with Egyptian foreign minister Ahmed Maher El Sayed, former secretary of state Madeleine Albright, Nobel Peace Prize-winner David Trimble of Northern Ireland, and Newsweek editor Fareed Zakaria; and briefings on the Indian elections, Chicago as a global city, and the crisis in U.S.-German relations.

During the past three years, The Chicago Council also collaborated with the Council on Foreign Relations in New York to host a series of occasional seminars as part of the President's Circle. The seminar series paired the expertise of scholars from the New York Council with a small and targeted Chicago-based audience to discuss and debate provocative matters.

China Roundtable

In 2002 The Chicago Council on Foreign Relations established a roundtable on China and U.S.-China relations. The China Roundtable, which meets approximately once every two months between September and June, provides a forum for organizations and individuals interested in China and U.S.-China relations to come together to consider key issues. The China Roundtable is a first important step in marshalling Chicago's China-related expertise and interests, attracting Chinese leaders and experts to Chicago, and strengthening the Midwest's role in shaping U.S.-China dialogue and in contributing more fully to policymaking on China. The China Roundtable helps strengthen connections among leaders and institutions across the Midwest by including participants from Indiana, Iowa, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, and Wisconsin.

The Roundtable has hosted a number of visiting delegations such as representatives of the National People's Congress and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs as well as individual experts addressing timely issues such as the Taiwan Straits and China's role in Southeast Asia.

Lyric Hughes Hale, publisher and founder of China Online; William Spence, senior counsel at Freeborn & Peters; and George Yu, professor at the University of Illinois at Urbana Champaign, have served as China Roundtable cochairs. Other participants are drawn from academia, business, community-based organizations, foundations, government, media, and nongovernmental organizations. The China Roundtable is generously supported by the Dr. Scholl Foundation.

India Roundtable

The India Roundtable is a pioneering forum for those in business, political, civic, and nonprofit arenas committed to active leadership, meaningful programming, and thoughtful dialogue on issues shaping India-U.S. economic and political relations. It fosters greater understanding and connections between India and Chicago in government, business, media, and academic circles; engages professionals interested in forming ties with Indian business and other leaders; links the Indian community with the Chicago community at large; creates a network of Indian American leaders in Chicago; and leverages the knowledge and connections these leaders provide for the good of Chicago.

The India Roundtable was launched during the visit of a delegation from the Confederation of Indian Industry and of India finance minister P. Chidambaram. During its initial stage, the Roundtable hosted Jaswant Singh, leader of the opposition in the Rajya Sabha. The Roundtable is cochaired by Marshall Bouton, president of The Chicago Council; Dipak Jain, dean of the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern University; and Ashish Prasad, partner at Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLP.

Young Leaders Exchange

For the past fifteen years the Council has conducted an exchange between emerging leaders from Chicago and Europe under the auspices of the Konrad Adenauer Program for European Policy Studies (see page 8). The exchange has proven indispensable in educating and engaging professionals moving into leadership positions on a range of critical issues. Delegations visit Chicago and selected European cities in alternate years to meet with leading government, corporate, academic, media, and community leaders. The exchange helps foster business and personal relationships between young American leaders and their counterparts in Europe. The Council has cooperated with the Dräger Foundation in Lübeck, Germany, since 1997 to organize the exchange.

The May 2003 exchange was held in Brussels, Budapest, and Berlin and focused on "Making Europe Work: Fourth Workshop on European Affairs.” Participants discussed the enlargement and reform of the European Union and NATO, security threats and cooperation, trade relations, immigration, and economic policy. The trip culminated in a meeting with former German chancellor Helmut Kohl at the Konrad Adenauer Foundation in Berlin.

In May 2004 the Council hosted a delegation of twenty professionals from the Czech Republic, Germany, Hungary, Lithuania, and Poland in Chicago. Participants also visited Washington, D.C., under the auspices of the German Marshall Fund of the United States. Highlights of the program included meetings with Henry Bienen, president of Northwestern University; Jim Edgar, during the exchange. Participants also met previous European participants of the Young Leaders Exchange in less formal settings in each city.

Leadership Study Mission to India

Periodically, the Council sponsors a Leadership Study Mission for members of its board of directors and President’s Circle. In February 2004 seventeen members traveled to India, accompanied by Council president Marshall Bouton, for an intimate view of the world’s largest democracy and the second largest Muslim country. Highlights of the trip included visits to Delhi (a sister city of Chicago), Agra, Jaipur, and Mumbai.

Marshall Bouton, a scholar on India who resided there for eight years, drew on his forty-year experience to create a unique opportunity to examine India through high-level meetings with government officials, including cabinet ministers, the U.S. ambassador, and the Maharaja of Jaipur. In-depth briefings with corporate, academic, media, and civic leaders focused on India’s economic growth (8 percent in 2003), foreign relations, technology, environmental and educational issues, and human rights.

In addition, special excursions helped capture the nuances of India’s history, culture, and diversity. India has twenty-four world heritage sites, many in the process of preservation. Study mission participants viewed the Taj Mahal, the Elephanta Caves, and the Agra Fort. Bim Bissell and Dr. Shobhita Punja served as cultural advisors for the trip.

former governor of Illinois; D. Cameron Findlay, former U.S. deputy secretary of labor; Frank Sharry, director of the National Immigration Forum; George Stephanopoulos, host of ABC’s This Week; and Linda Wolfe, chairman and CEO of Leo Burnett Worldwide.

In May 2005 a delegation of fifteen Americans visited Brussels, Vilnius, and Berlin, focusing on the enlargement of the European Union. In each city, participants gained unique insights and perspectives on the ambitious and often difficult process of expanding the EU. The trip culminated in Berlin with a conference at the Aspen Institute, where participants discussed issues that arose national and international discourse

Finding solutions to today's most vexing problems requires a pooling of intellectual capital and a focusing of time and attention. Through studies, task forces, and conferences the Council initiates the search for answers and raises the midwestern voice as it brings together the world's best minds, adds to the knowledge base, and develops policy alternatives on issues of regional, national, and international importance.

A prominent contributor to national and international opinion and policy formation

Public Opinion and Foreign Policy Studies

The Chicago Council's public opinion study is the preeminent and most widely cited source of information on U.S. public and leadership attitudes on international relations and foreign policy. Conducted every four years since 1974, it is unmatched in continuity and breadth on key foreign policy questions. Over the past three years, the project has been expanded to include parallel studies in other countries, providing rich, comparative data on foreign policy attitudes around the world.

The 2002 project, entitled "Worldviews 2002: Public Opinion and Foreign Policy," included for the first time a study on foreign policy attitudes in six European countries in collaboration with the German Marshall Fund of the United States. The U.S. and European questionnaires were developed jointly to create continuity and comparability in focus and question wording. On September 4, 2002, just before the first anniversary of the 9/11 terrorist attacks, findings related to the war on terrorism and transatlantic relations were released. A second release on October 4, 2002, focused on the remaining U.S. findings and included dissemination of the three full reports on the U.S., European, and comparative findings.

The results of the combined studies drew widespread international attention from the news media as well as policymakers at the highest levels of government in the United States and abroad. At a time when America and the international community had been profoundly shaken by the events of September 11 and its aftermath, there was a real need to gauge how American perceptions of the world and the role of the United States in it had changed. This study accomplished that goal and represents the most comprehensive assessment of American and European public and leadership attitudes on foreign policy issues ever undertaken.

The success of this project led the Council to undertake another study two years later, instead of the usual four. In 2004 the Council conducted parallel studies in the United States, Mexico, and South Korea in partnership with the Centro de Investigación y Docencia Económicas (CIDE) and the Consejo Mexicano de Asuntos Internacionales (COMEXI) in Mexico and the East Asia Institute in South Korea. The project yielded three reports, one on the U.S. public and leadership survey, and one each on the comparative U.S.-Mexico and U.S.-South Korea results. The Council's Mexican partners also released a full report focused exclusively on the Mexican study.

The release of the reports, entitled "Global Views 2004," included media briefings and seminars in Washington, D.C., to bring broad attention to the findings and explore the themes of the reports, including the nature of the world order, the rights and responsibilities of nation-states and international institutions, and the effect of American power.

The 2002 study was generously funded by the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation, the McCormick Tribune Foundation, the German Marshall Fund of the United States, and the United States-Japan Foundation. The 2004 study was funded by the Crown Family Foundation, John F. Manley, the McCormick Tribune Foundation, the Ford Foundation, the Korea Foundation, and James Denny.

Immigration Task Force

To strengthen its role as a producer of information and analysis on critical issues, the Council has begun convening task forces on topics of importance to the Midwest and the nation as a whole. The Midwest's unique experiences and perspectives on these topics can bring valuable lessons and insights to the national debate on these matters.

The Council's first independent task force was convened in September 2003 to examine the key opportunities and challenges of immigration to the United States and to make national policy recommendations. The Immigration Task Force was cochaired by former Illinois governor Jim Edgar, former INS commissioner Doris Meissner of the Migration Policy Institute, and Chicago business leader Alejandro Silva, president of Evans Food Products. The Task Force included forty leading figures from the Midwest and beyond who represented the various groupings of stakeholders in the immigration debate.

The findings and recommendations of the Immigration Task Force were released on June 10, 2004, in a published report that has been widely disseminated. The Task Force concluded that the Midwest's recent experience with a growing influx of immigrants is a microcosm for what is occurring across the country and that its recommendations are relevant nationwide. It recommended that a bipartisan commitment be made by the president and the Congress to make immigration reform a policy priority in 2005. The Task Force recommended modification and greater flexibility in the temporary and permanent-based visa categories, backlog reductions, and timely processing of visa applications in order to facilitate trade, travel, study, and family reunification. It also recommends the development of a national immigrant integration policy that aims to incorporate new Americans fully into the economic, social, and political fabric of the United States.

The Atlantic Conference

For more than thirty years, the Atlantic Conference has brought together leaders in government, think tanks, business, academia, and the media from North America, South America, and Europe to examine issues of governance, security, and economic development facing the Atlantic community and how the Atlantic partners can contribute to international peace and security. This biennial event rotates among the continents and now includes Africa.

The 2002 Atlantic Conference was held November 21–24 in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Leaders from twenty countries discussed terrorism and globalization as the defining challenges of our era and how the Atlantic area nations can work together to respond to these challenges. A keynote address was delivered by Celso Lafer, minister of foreign affairs of Brazil, and a special panel was convened to present post-election political, economic, and social perspectives on Brazil. The conference was chaired by Senator Richard J. Durbin (D-IL) and included for the first time participants from Africa. The 2002 conference was sponsored by the Konrad Adenauer Foundation, American Airlines, Robert Bosch Stiftung, the German Marshall Fund of the United States, United Airlines, and Varig Airlines.

The Chicago Council cohosted the 2004 Atlantic Conference with the South African Institute of International Affairs in Cape Town, South Africa, November 11–13, 2004. Senator Richard J. Durbin (D-IL), Senator Susan M. Collins (R-ME), and Fred Phaswana, national chairman of the South African Institute of International Affairs (SAIIA), cochaired the conference.

Entitled “Rules of the Game: The Atlantic Region in a Changing World Order,” the conference explored the “rules” governing the global community, the tension between the multilateral world structure and unilateral national action, and the responses of the Atlantic players. The conference also examined world trade issues, international security cooperation, and the Atlantic community’s political, social, and economic relations in an increasingly integrated world.

The 2004 conference was sponsored by Anglo-American, BP, Robert Bosch Stiftung, the German Marshall Fund of the United States, Lufthansa, Motorola, the Ernest Oppenheimer Memorial Trust, and the Standard Bank of South Africa. It was supported by the Consulate General of South Africa in Chicago and the Illinois Trade Office in South Africa.

America and the World Conference

This new conference, presented in cooperation with the McCormick Tribune Foundation and held in Chicago, brings together foreign policy specialists from think tanks, academia, media, government, nongovernmental organizations, and business from the United States and abroad to discuss key global issues. The inaugural America and the World Conference was held September 12–14, 2002, and addressed the topic “America and the World: One Year after the Attacks.” More than fifteen countries from around the world were represented. The keynote speech was given by General Wesley Clark, former supreme allied commander Europe. Issues of where we stand on the war on terrorism, the impact of the war on terrorism on the international system, and where we should go from here were the focus of the discussions. The 2002 conference was supported by the McCormick Tribune Foundation, Bank One Foundation, Kirkland & Ellis, and Sidley Austin Brown & Wood.

The second conference was held June 17–19, 2004, and focused on “World Order in an Era of American Primacy.” The panel discussions focused on unilateral versus multilateral U.S. foreign policy, global security, the international economic order, and the role of multilateral institutions. The 2004 conference was supported by Bank One Foundation; Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw LLC; and Lufthansa.

Midwest World Affairs Symposium on U.S-Mexico Relations

In May 2003 the Council convened a Midwest World Affairs Symposium on U.S-Mexico Relations to address issues related to new immigrant communities in Chicago and the Midwest and to foster closer relations between The Chicago Council and partner world affairs organizations. The Chicago Council collaborated with the Mexican Council on Foreign Relations, the University of Chicago, the University of Notre Dame, the U.S.-Mexico Chamber of Commerce, and several other organizations to present the two-day symposium. The symposium brought together business, academic, NGO, and immigrant community participants as well as state and municipal government leaders from the greater Midwest, elsewhere in the United States, and Mexico. The opening speech was delivered by Fernando Canales, secretary of the economy of Mexico, and a keynote address was presented by Jorge Castañeda, former secretary of foreign affairs of Mexico. The event examined immigration, NAFTA, border issues, and homeland security after 9/11 as well as the future of North America.

The symposium was sponsored by American Airlines; The Boeing Company; Corn Products International; Equity International; Evans Food Products; Harris Bank; International Truck and Engine Corporation; Mayer, Brown, Rowe and Maw LLC; Mexico Tourism Board; and Motorola, Inc.

The Ditchley Conference

In 1987 the Council accepted an invitation from the Ditchley Foundation of England to cosponsor a series of conferences in England and the midwestern United States. The conference brings together forty to fifty policy, governmental, and media specialists from Europe and the United States to discuss matters of common interest to the British and American peoples. The conferences are held approximately every two years on alternating sides of the Atlantic. The Cantigny Conference Series of the McCormick Tribune Foundation is a critical sponsor and co-organizer of this project.

The most recent Ditchley Conference was held May 4–6, 2005, at Cantigny Park in Wheaton, Illinois. The conference convened approximately forty participants from the United States and Britain to discuss “World Opinion and Public Diplomacy: How Should Policymakers Influence and Be Influenced?” The conference began with plenary sessions addressing world public opinion and its impact on policy and public diplomacy. Participants were then divided into working groups to define the global political context, the instruments of public diplomacy, and ways of looking into the future. On the last day, each group presented their final reports to the entire conference.

The 2005 Ditchley Conference was co-chaired by the Right Honourable Lord Kinnock of Bedwelty, former leader of the opposition in the British parliament and vice president of the European Commission; Lewis Manilow, formerly of the Advisory Commission on Public Diplomacy; and Newton Minow, senior counsel at Sidley Austin Brown and Wood.

special events

Special events offer the Council the opportunity to host important programs in fulfillment of its mission while raising substantial funds to keep the organization strong and thriving. From recognizing outstanding global leadership to bringing dialogue about global issues into countless small, private settings across Chicago, special events have become a critical component of the Council's continued dynamism.

A regional magnet for outstanding leadership

Global Leadership Awards Dinner

The Global Leadership Awards were established to honor distinguished individuals for outstanding achievement in the international sphere, especially contributions to world peace, prosperity, and security as well as to the Chicago community. Local, national, and international figures are honored annually with the award.

The inaugural Global Leadership Awards Dinner was held in June 2003 with two honorees: former U.S. senator George Mitchell and John H. Bryan, retired chairman and chief executive officer of the Sara Lee Corporation. Jamie Dimon, then chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Bank One Corporation, chaired the event with dinner hosts John F. and Mary Manley. The dinner raised more than $430,000 for Council programs.

The second annual dinner was held on May 17, 2004, with four honorees. John W. Madigan, retired chairman and chief executive officer of Tribune Company, and Richard L. Thomas, retired chairman of First Chicago NBD Corporation, received local awards. The national and international awardees were Catherine Ann Bertini, former executive director of the United Nations World Food Programme, and the Right Honourable Lord Robertson, former secretary general of NATO. Patrick and Shirley Welsh Ryan were the dinner chairs, and John F. and Mary Manley were the dinner hosts. The 2004 event raised $483,000 for the Council.

The third annual dinner was held on May 23, 2005, honoring Edgar D. Jannotta, chairman of William Blair & Company, with the local award; Ambassador Carla A. Hills, former U.S. trade representative, with the national award; and Dr. Helmut Kohl, former chancellor of Germany, with the international award. The dinner chair was William A. Osborn, chairman and chief executive officer of Northern Trust Corporation, the dinner hosts were John F. and Mary Manley, and the dinner cochairs were Patrick and Shirley Welsh Ryan and Northern Trust Corporation. The dinner raised $550,000.

Global Connections Dinner Series

The Global Connections Dinner Series, launched in 2003, has proven a popular success in providing members the opportunity to explore issues of international concern with renowned experts. Since its inception, eighty dinners have been held on a variety of topics, from foreign policy in an election year and China's impact on globalization to trends in international commerce.

Dinners are hosted by members of the Council's board of directors and President's Circle, who graciously open their homes and favorite venues to Council members, creating personal atmospheres for discussing critical international issues with featured guests. Hundreds of members have participated in the series, which raises almost $100,000 each year in support of Council programs.

The first series was held in June 2003 with twenty-five dinners and was chaired by Shirley Welsh Ryan. Neiman Marcus Northbrook, represented by vice president and general manager Kathy Suto and public relations manager Paula Brady, also pledged time and resources to the successful planning and implementation of the dinners. The second annual series was held in June 2004 and was cochaired by Geda Maso Condit and Clare Muñana. During the 2004–05 program year, two series were held, one in the fall of 2004 and the other in spring 2005. Council board member Fred G. Steingraber chairs the current efforts of this successful series.

governance and support

The Council is fortunate to have some of Chicago's most distinguished civic, business, government, and academic leaders as board members and supporters. Thanks to the generous efforts of these individuals and of countless businesses, foundations, and other organizations, the Council is a vital and growing Chicago institution more than eighty years after its founding.

A strong community of individuals and institutions committed to furthering the Council's mission
